

Abstract

A gas tank valve comprises a wheel handle mounted on a control stem. The wheel handle can be displaced on the control stem in the direction of the longitudinal axis of the stem between a first position, in which the wheel handle is coupled to the stem, with a view to activating it, and a second, uncoupled position, in which the wheel can turn freely on the stem without causing rotational movement of the stem.